

No Time To Kill

What You Need to Know
About the Most Important Issue
In the World Today
Bruce A. Roth

No Time to Kill is a holistic analysis of issues which threaten the extinction of life on a mass scale: WMDs, genocide, and terrorism. Roth focuses on these complex problems through the lenses of anthropology, psychology, theology, sociology, law, physical science, politics, and the history of war and weaponry in order to answer these questions:

Is mankind becoming less warlike or more warlike? • Why don't enlightened men control their aggressive tendency that leads to violence? • Why do people turn away from confronting these vital issues of WMDs, genocide, and terrorism? • Why have our methods of preventing war and maintaining peace failed to do so? • Why can't the UN preserve world order? • How can dictators and despots perpetrate inhumane acts and genocide without being brought swiftly to international justice? • If people do not have the legal right to resort to violence in order to protect their interests, why do nations have the right to use violence when protecting their national interests? • Can terrorism be fought without a war? • Why do civil wars rage within nations without international intervention? • Is there a more effective system of international justice?
